PROPER FEEDING MAKES FLOCKS PAY

High Production Records Made on Demonstration Poultry Farms in State.

"The geese that laid the golden eggs" is dead, but successful fadec poultrymen know that they can reap just as rich a harvest from their own poultry flocks, providing they give them proper feed and care.

These principles of production were never more properly applied than in the egg game, according to J. L. Hayes, poultry specialist of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture. In the past few years, he has placed over the poultry records from the demonstration farms about the state, and picks out the best records. Then he has made a study of the records, and has found that the feeding of a properly balanced ration to the hens is the key to success.

The farmers who spend a little more to buy the feeds which they cannot produce on their farms, but which are necessary to balance the rations, are the ones who are making the most money. "A hen is an efficient machine that can create a profit if given the proper material with which to do it. But she cannot do it on a minimum ration."

Many high records.

During the month of February, some records were made which will be hard to beat. Mrs. Henry Scholte, Waubesa county, with Barred Plymouth Rocks, kept her feed cost down to 18 cents per hen for the month. Barney Schommer, Marathon county, got a return of $2.40 for every dollar spent for feed, and Mrs. E. P. Wiesie, Marathon county, with a flock of Brown Leghorns, had a return of $2.77 for every dollar expended for feed.

"Each of these parties," says Hayes, "was using a properly balanced ration that included animal protein. It is in hopes that they try for production and profit unless the right feed is given in the right way. This means corn in the scratch and mash and not a mixture of just oats and barley."

FARM MEETINGS

RADIO WILL MAKE LAST CALL FAVORING ALFAFA ON 16TH

Alfalfa is making its third and last call. April 16 is full of appeals for an increased acreage of the wonder legume.

Broadcasting from station WHA, University of Wisconsin, at 7:30 p. m., April 16, L. E. Graber, recognized throughout the Middle West as an authority on alfalfa, will talk on "Better Alfalfa." Mrs. J. A. Graber, the discussion will be short and lively. The air will be full of the many valuable suggestions to alfalfa growers which Graber has gained from his 25 years of experience with this plant.

At 7:30 p. m., April 21, P. B. Morrison, authority on Pood and Portland broadcast from the same station.

Morrison has some interesting things to say about alfalfa—facts which are of great value to the economic growing and fattening of livestock.

JUNIOR LIVESTOCK SHOW IN MADISON

OCTOBER 21 TO 23

Wisconsin's junior livestock show will be held in Madison, October 21 to 23, according to the Wisconsin College of Agriculture and Reid Murray, secretary of the Wisconsin Livestock Breeders' association.

A number of Rock county juniors, members of the Junior Livestock club, fitting baby beavers, lambs and pigs will compete at this annual Junior stock show classic.

APPLE SCAB STARTS MATURING EARLY

Apple scab is starting earlier than usual this year.

This disease annually causes great losses to the fruit industry, according to R. E. Vaughan, extension specialist, plant diseases of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture. It is a fungus disease of the fruit and foliage, which lives over winter in the dead leaves that have fallen to the ground, and in the buds of the trees.

It is maturing and being shot into the air two or three weeks earlier this year than in most seasons," says Vaughan. "This means that a spray of lime sulphur, one and one-fourth gallons to 50 gallons of water, will pay big returns if applied just as the buds break in the spring. This is later than the previous year."

Vaughan is urging orchardists to desire more information regarding the disease of the spray to get in touch with the county agent, an agricultural teacher, or the College of Agriculture. The pre-spray has shown excellent results during several years of experimental work with such reliable scabbing varieties as Fameuse, Dudley and Lube's Queen.

THREE NEW OUTBREAKS OF DREADED DISEASE

Another outbreak of the hoof and mouth disease, a fatal and federal quarantined disease, has been reported from a herd of 125 infected hogs in the Lawrenceville district, near Los Angeles, Calif. The new outbreak makes three discoveries within the last 48 hours.

Supervisors from every county in southern California meet in Los Angeles to adopt drastic measures to fight the spreading disease.

Five people were arrested in northern California for violation of the quarantine rules.

Orders to kill all scavenger birds, hares, and other animals and the crowd have been issued to inspectors on the western boundary of Arizona.

ORFORDVILLE FARMERS FORM NEW SPRAY RING

There will be at least 17 spray rings operating in Rock county the coming season under the direction of County Agent E. T. Glassen. One of the most recent was formed in Orfordville, with Richard Egan, president, O. A. Egan, first vice-president, and A. E. Egan, secretary and treasurer. A new power sprayer will be purchased by the association.

BIG CONVENTION OPENS THURSDAY

Mission Society Officers Arrive Wednesday for Pre-Convention Meetings.

In the meeting of the Northwest Branch of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist church, the first session of which will be held Thursday night, Janesville will be the center of the largest church meeting in its history, as the territory of the northwest branch includes societies in the states of Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan and Indiana.

The Northwest Branch was organized in Chicago in 1876, with Mrs. Heshon Hamilton as president and Mrs. J. P. Willing as corresponding secretary. Receipts for the first year were $5,211.81 and up to and including last year the receipts totaled $6,897,233.20.

Mrs. A. T. Webb, Chicago, is the present head of the branch. The convention Thursday is the first one to be held outside of Chicago in four years.

300 Missionaries Supported

Included in the branch are the following churches: Rock River, Illinois, Indiana, North Indiana, Detroit, Michigan, Wisconsin, West Wisconsin, Chicago, German, Central, Swedish, Norwegian, Finnish, and others. Three hundred missionaries have been sent out and many other native workers supported by this branch since its organization.

Janesville is in the Janesville district of the Wisconsin conference, with Mrs. George Jacobs, this city, as president of the district; Mrs. E. F. Case, this city, first vice president; Mrs. J. P. Parker, this city, president of young people's work; Mrs. Paul Parker, this city, extension secretary; and Mrs. P. T. Richards, this city, church superintendent.

Important part in financing the recent campaigns.

The McAdoo forces now claim they have more than 100 delegates, a total larger than any other candidate has pledged. This of course is a long way from two-thirds. But the primaries are by no means over. The McAdoo men are not very hopeful of doing better than a "few delegates" in the Illinois primaries on April 8.

George Brennan has a slate of "unimpaired" delegates and the McAdoo men are all the more determined to win in Nebraska out of deference to Governor Charles Bryan, but the delegates they want to win are expected to be expected to win to McAdoo after the first few ballots.

WILSON AND McADOO

The fight being waged by the McAdoo forces in nearly every state where the old organization men have been in control is very much like that which preceded the Baltimore convention in 1912. It begins to look more and more as if the struggle, while ostensibly in favor of individuals, is really a fundamental controversy as to whether the organization "bosses" and the so-called progressives, which, however, is only another way of referring in most cases to the Wilson and anti-Wilson wings in the democratic party.

Officers Arrive Wednesday

Delegates are expected from various parts of the four states, already nearly 100 delegates are expected to be present.

Beginning Tuesday night, many committee conferences are to be held. Mrs. J. M. Reed, Benton Harbor, Mich., home base secretary, will head the various conference secretaries at 7:30 Tuesday night at the church. They hold another conference Wednesday morning. Branch officers are to arrive Wednesday and Thursday in session Wednesday and Thursday.

Mrs. Wones, Milwaukee, conference secretary, has called a meeting Thursday noon, when lunch will be served at the church. District presidents and district corresponding secretaries of the Wisconsin conference will attend this session. Found in Lee, Appleton, Milwaukee and Janesville are the articles of the Wisconsin conference. A supper is to be served Thursday night, at which time Mrs. Wones is to meet all district officers of the Wisconsin conference. Mrs. Webb will preside at the session at 7:45 p. m. Thursday.

sixth, and that out of a possible 26 delegates they will have at least 10 and maybe 12.

There is, however, a significance in what the Wisconsin railroad men did. Heretofore one of the principal arguments of the McAdoo campaign has been that their leaders would be the railroad vote if he were the presidential nominee. With the certainty that Senator La Follette will be a candidate in the question now is whether much of the railroad strength, labor vote which Mr. McAdoo might expect seeing to the Wisconsin senator on a third party ticket.

McAdoo Forces are Happy

The McAdoo forces are happy, however, over the progress they have made thus far and are not concerned yet over what will happen after the nomination convention. The most striking victory won by the McAdoo forces was that in which Wilbur Marsh, national committee-man, friend of Charles Murphy, Tom Taggart, George Brennan and the organization leaders in the democratic party, was defeated by the McAdoo manager in Iowa, Clyde Herring of Des Moines. Edward T. Meredith, former secretary of agriculture and a McAdoo candidate was elected delegate-at-large and will be chairman of the delegation. Marsh won only one and one-half out of the 11 contested districts. The unit rule was imposed, however, and this gives McAdoo Iowa's 26 votes.

The Iowa Fight

The fight in Iowa goes back to the San Francisco convention of 1912, when Wilbur Marsh, using the unit rule, prevented several men in the Iowa delegation from voting. It is said that the delegation was saving for Cox.

Wilbur Marsh has always been a conspicuous figure at meetings of the democratic national committee. As treasurer of the party, he has played an important part in financing the recent campaigns.

The McAdoo forces now claim they have more than 100 delegates, a total larger than any other candidate has pledged. This of course is a long way from two-thirds. But the primaries are by no means over. The McAdoo men are not very hopeful of doing better than a "few delegates" in the Illinois primaries on April 8.

VITAL QUESTION IN STODDARD CASE

Defense Contends Against Validity of Blanket Search Warrants for Boze.

Arguments of attorneys over the validity of the search warrant, which resulted in the arrest of Roy Stoddard on a liquor possession charge two weeks ago, were heard by Judge H. L. Maschell in municipal court Monday afternoon. At the conclusion of the arguments the judge announced he would give a decision within a few days, and should Stoddard be held for trial the date will be April 15.

E. H. Ryan, the defendant's attorney, contended that the individual search of all people happening to be in an establishment at the time of a raid is unconstitutional. He held that the authorities should have an individual search warrant for Stoddard instead of a blanket warrant for W. A. Knap's place and everybody found in it.

"The courts hold that a man cannot be compelled to give evidence against himself," said Ryan. "If Stoddard is in an establishment at the time of a raid, it is his duty to open up to the police not only his own right but it is their duty to open up the whole establishment. It is not their duty to have a search warrant to pick up any stolen goods he might drop."

Police attach a great deal of importance to the outcome of the case, inasmuch as it will be a vital point in future raids. Should the defendant's contention be upheld, they would be obliged to search for individual search warrants in future raids on such establishments. Both attorneys furnish the court with several authorities to uphold their argument.

Britt and Dulin Are Appointed as Ward Constables

William E. Dunn, 382 South Park street, and Frank M. Britt, 612 Lincoln street, were appointed constables by City Manager Henry Thayer, Tuesday, in the Fifth and Fourth wards respectively. The appointments were made in accordance with the ruling of the City Attorney, W. H. Cunningham, elected to whom he held that constables were no longer elective, but appointive. Both were instructed to file bonds and oaths of office. Both have served as constables for many years and are, certainly, the best in the city functioning in that capacity.

The Four Stragglers

By FRANK L. PACKARD

Copyright, 1923, Geo. H. Doran Co., Serialized by Ledger Syndicate.

CAPTAIN FRANCIS NEWCOMB, ex-officer in the great war, who broke into society, but who is really Shadow Varne, noted figure of underworld, and in charge of the big steels that have set London astir.

PAT, CHREMARINE, model London thief, who has not Newcombe in the backwaters of the war, along with RUNNELLS, a valet, who had done some big thefts on his own account, and THE FOURTH STRAGGLER, who hears the crooks agree to combine after the armistice, and who disappears.

POLLY WICKES, a flower-girl, whom Newcombe has adopted and sent to America to be educated with the idea of insuring social contacts of the heat before he leaves England after the armistice, come his hails.

DORA MARLIN, daughter of an eccentric millionaire, who broke into society, and who has been in the Florida Keys, where MR. MARLIN, the mad magnate, has hidden more than half a million dollars, the existence of which Newcombe learns inadvertently from his beautiful ward.

HOWARD LOCKIE, son of a big business man, who taken Newcombe and Runnels to Florida on his steam yacht. He falls in love with Polly.

They had been separated for nearly four years. As for the mother, she had understood that she was to be taught to live in a different world, to acquire the viewpoints of a different station in life, in order that she might fit herself to take her place in that world and that station where her guardian lived and moved. Today she understood this in a much more mature way, and she had tried to do her best—but she could never forget the old life no matter how completely severed she might be from it, or how far from it she might be removed, even in a physical sense; though gradually, she was conscious, the past had become less real, less poignant and more like a dream that came at times and disappeared hauntingly in her memory.

What if any wonder that she was beside herself with glad excitement tonight, when at any moment now the one person in all the world who had been so good to her, to whom she owed a debt of gratitude that she could never even be able to express, much less repay, would—would return? He was sure of it. After all, it wasn't so very late, and—

YOUR BABY and MINE

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

Mrs. Eldred is happy to advise all mothers about the care of their children of any age, or on any subject which does not belong in the field of the doctor.

Mrs. N. H. writes:

"Can you help me with the list of clothes for baby's layette? Are there the right clothes—namely band, cotton and wool shirt, flannel diaper, cotton and wool stockings, lawn dress, petticoat, and cap?"

"Can baby be allowed to wear a rubber diaper all the time?"

Answer

I shall be happy to send you the list of clothes necessary for a modern baby layette if you will send me a self-addressed and stamped envelope. (Blind for the first six weeks only, then the knit band with straps and tabs for diaper), part wool shirt, bird's eye diaper, part wool petticoat, and slip. No stockings unless the weather is frightfully cold. The petticoat will keep the feet warm. Rubber diapers can be worn on occasions but not constantly.

Naturally, you will regret the pacifier habit if you do not speedily break the baby of it. How can a four-month baby insist on anything? If she cries—crying is better for her than a pacifier. Don't give in to her.

Distressed Tom.

Perhaps the girl tries to be a little vampire and feels that powder and rouge are necessary attributes. If you disapprove of makeup and she does not respect your wishes in the matter, the only thing for you to do is to find a girl who does not paint and suits your taste better.

M. P. and B. K.: Buy hairpins at the drug store and use them.

Then wash the hair thoroughly with the tea and let it dry on.

An hour or two after the hair has been dried, rinse it in clear water and dry it again.

Speak to the mother of the children. It will do little good to remove the trouble from part of the family when doubtless the whole family suffers.

Public impressions make a big difference in major league baseball. Just because fans are not to form opinions of the comparative strength of teams of the same league when they clash in exhibition games, President Heydler of the National League frowns upon a continuance of intra-league contests. Referring to New York from an angle, he says: "I heard some agitation against playing intra-league games. Some of the managers declared that, with a few exceptions, they would not play against other clubs in their own league, they are compelled to place their first teams in the field most of the time and thus do not get a real chance to show themselves as rivals." Of course, brings this about.

The public forms some erroneous impressions from these games. The public judges solely by the scores. A score manager brings their teams along slowly and others crowd their clubs faster. The games really mean nothing at all. The main object of a baseball game is to get a line on the youngsters and to get the veterans in good condition.

It is impossible to live upon past performance in sports. This has been demonstrated time and again. The athlete must be up and coming all the time. The public has a right to him and off goes his head. The latest example is Leon Cadore, who went with the Chicago White Sox last season. He was a star in the league with the National League. This year he has gone and refused to show the Chicago White Sox last season. He was a star in the league with the National League. This year he has gone and refused to show the Chicago White Sox last season.

THE 1924 season is going to be a tremendous one in collegiate track and field circles. The Penn relay carnival is expected to draw 500 college and school boys, which would be 75 more than took part last year. The Drake relays at Des Moines, April 25-26, have already drawn 1,500 college and high school athletes. Thirty-eight teams are lined up for the inter-collegiate A. A. games at Harvard, May 30 and 31. Five hundred athletes are expected to take part in the 1924 Iowa games will draw the cream of the west and of the east. Intercollegiate meets will also draw huge entries. The Michigan relays are expected to attract at least 150 high schools. The Michigan intercollegiate is pulling a huge entry list.

NO HOPE FOR WASHINGTON

By NORMAN E. BROWN.

After watching the Washington Senators in action at Tampa, Fla., and following the progress of the team generally since leaving the Baseball State, I can't see Clark Griffith's crew finishing in the first division this coming campaign.

Griffith still has the same old outfit—Walter Johnson and a fair team. There is little reason for expecting any more of them than they produced last year, when they managed to nose into fourth place late in the year. The Red Sox and Athletics, two second division clubs last season, look stronger this year. Which means the Senators will have a tough job holding fourth.

Griffith's pitching staff always has been his main asset. Johnson, judged from his wonderful work last year and his present condition, still is a good strider the coming summer. I can see only one other pitcher as his running mate, Zachary Miller. He will not be a winner. Russell is getting a winner is problematical.

Griffith's lineup in his young Martins, "Dan" McGrew and Fred Marbury, McGrew and Marbury made their debut last fall. Marbury, coming up from the minors, worked four games without being charged with a defeat. This year he has the advantage of that experience and a spring of coaching down south. He has a beautiful chance of pace, the best I saw in the south. And what is a real asset, coolness in action.

McGrew broke into a game or two last season. He threw a few fast balls into the hands of the opposing batters with his smoke ball. It reminds one of Walt Johnson's best brand. Martin is a third timer. He failed to make the grade in two other try-outs but seems ready now. Griffith has one or two other young kids who look good in the box. All of these would come through eventually, but there is no reason to believe the pitchers he now has can stand the league on its head.

Griff is counting on Sam Rice, Goslin and the little old man, Nemo, to hold for his outfield. Rice needs no unbolting. Goslin is a good fielder. Leibold is through, however. Joe Evans will probably play left eventually.

In the infield Joe Judge at first, Manager Harris at second and Dick at short are in their old positions. Prothro, a rookie, looks awfully sweet around third and his well should make a good chance. Griffith has no other crack in his infield. He has no other crack in his infield. He has no other crack in his infield.

Stan Harris, baby manager of the majors, may get more pep out of the crack in his prediction of a poor season. He is little more than field captain, however. Clark Griffith is still manager but stays in his civilian clothes.

The team may make it interesting for the other seven clubs at times, but has a sort of hopeless season ahead in my opinion.

EXPERTS ADJUST BURDENS TO GIVE GERMANY CHANCE

Financial engagements the experts provide automatic installation of strict control by the allies which would be vested with extended powers over the treasury of the reich.

Keep Economic Unity.

In connection with the Ruhr, the experts consider economic re-establishment of Germany can be durable only on one condition: the economic unity of the country must be entirely re-established.

Without raising the question of military occupation of the Ruhr, the experts indicate that it will be necessary for Germany to resume free disposal of customs and state industries like forests, coal mining and railroads in the territory occupied by French troops.

The railroads of the Ruhr and Rhine-land would be under special supervision of an allied representative in order to assure normal traffic and security for French troops.

marks, raised by means of an international loan of 800,000,000 gold marks plus 200,000,000 from the transportation tax. The second and third years she would pay 1,200,000,000 gold marks; the fourth year 1,750,000,000 and the fifth, 2,400,000,000, and so on.

From the sixth year the reparation commission would be supplied with the foregoing of 2,400,000,000 gold marks dependent on a prosperity index carefully established by the law committee. The supplementary payments under this index could gradually reach several hundred millions of gold marks.

The supplementary total of 2,400,000,000 marks would be thus obtained: From budget receipts, 1,500,000,000 marks; from transportation tax and railroad receipts, 600,000,000 marks; from mortgage on industries, 300,000,000.

CHAPTER XXX.

Why Wilson broke with Lansing and how the government came to a halt without an active president.

No incident in American history parallel to the few days in which the president of the United States had no president for immediately following Woodrow Wilson's physical breakdown is more important to the nation's future than the chief executive.

Opinions may differ as to whether any important piece of public business was neglected—the cabinet took care of every decision and executed every order. But there can be no doubt that for a few days at least immediately after his return from the western trip the president was disabled and unable to discharge the duties of his office to the extent that he did in the preceding years of his term.

Serious moments there were when it was thought Mr. Wilson would not live. As the crisis was passed and it became apparent that the president would be able to discharge the rest of his life and would be unable to see many callers or write communications on matters of state, his supporters developed the feeling that the president would be unable to discharge the duties of his office to the extent that he did in the preceding years of his term.

The Constitution itself is not very clear on the question of what shall be done when a president is disabled. It says:

"In case of the removal of the president from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability, the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the vice president, and the congress may by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability, both of the president and vice president, declaring what officer shall then act as president, and when the disability of the president or vice president shall be removed or a president shall be elected."

Is the vice president to become president on emergency occasions? Is the vice president to discharge the powers of the presidential office until the president's disability is removed? No vice president has ever assumed office in the disability of a president and Mr. Thomas R. Marshall, who was vice president during President Wilson's incapacity made no effort to succeed him. Congress has never passed a law specifically giving the procedure that should be followed in case of presidential inability.

After the president suffered a stroke, his condition was so alarming that he was unable for several days to sign documents or attend to public business. The secretary of state, Robert Lansing, called at the executive offices to learn the true condition of the president, because the king and queen of the Belgium, who were in New York, had expressed a desire to come to Washington if they could be received. Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, the president's physician, told Mr. Lansing that Mr. Wilson was in no condition to receive the king and queen, much as he would like to do so, and that perhaps if their itinerary was rearranged, the visit might be accomplished. Later on, Mr. Lansing was unable to obtain any definite information as to the true nature of the president's illness and the day he asked Mr. Tamm, the president's private secretary, if he knew whether the president was able to sign documents and carry on his duties, Mr. Lansing decided the fact that a demand might be made to have the vice president take office under the disability article of the constitution. Secretary Tamm, at such a prospect and insisted that neither he nor Dr. Grayson would certify to such a condition of the president's health.

Mr. Lansing suggested that for appearances, at least, a cabinet meeting should be called and that this would install confidence in the country that the government was functioning. The first meeting of the cabinet was called with the knowledge of both the president's private secretary and his physician. Dr. Grayson attended the cabinet meeting and reported on the improvement in Mr. Wilson's condition. There was no discussion of this or any other meeting about the vice president succeeding Mr. Wilson.

In all, 25 cabinet meetings were held, and many important matters discussed and decided. During this time might have been done the public interest if cabinet sessions had not been convened and there is every reason to believe that a demand would then have been made in the senate for succession by Vice President Marshall.

When Mr. Wilson gradually recovered to the point of being able to listen to affairs of state he was apprised of the fact that cabinet meetings had been held. He was told of the incident which led to the summoning of the cabinet. He was unaware of the situation which had existed and of the practically unanimous belief of all his advisers that the holding of cabinet meetings would preserve public confidence in the government while he was unable to function. He demanded the resignation of the secretary of state, Lansing, as a punishment and example.

There were, of course, contributory reasons such as the discussed in Paris by Mr. Lansing with respect to the Shantung settlement. Mr. Wilson showed displeasure, for instance, on his western trip when he received a telegram from Mr. Lansing stating that one of the attaches of the American peace mission testified before the Senate Foreign Relations committee had revealed Mr. Lansing's disagreement with the president on the Shantung question, a circumstance which had up to that time been rumored but not revealed, and which, of course, was ammunition for Mr. Wilson's opponents in the treaty fight.

What Mr. Lansing did as secretary of state, the responsible officer of the government who must certify to all proclamations and whose duty under the law it is to notify the president of the death or disability of the president undoubtedly was the best thing that would irritate an individual who felt he was by no means incapacitated. An impartial judgment of the affair cannot but lead to the conclusion that the unprecedented functioning of the cabinet as an entity without executive direction, guidance, or authority except as derived by implication from the statutes was a tactical move which prevented the important question of technical disability from being raised by the many who were opposed to Mr. Wilson in those bitter days of the treaty fight.

The president's shaky signature to public documents and the gradual improvement thereafter in his handwriting tell a story of how difficult it was for the president to carry on his duties of physical distress. He was incapable of sustained effort. At first he could give an hour or so to official duties and later two hours and then more as his health improved. Only the most important matters were placed before him in the limited time that his physicians said he could afford to give to public business.

Unfavorable news was withheld from Mr. Wilson and nothing was done that was in the least calculated to excite or disturb Mr. Wilson was taken to emotional outbursts, very often, and grew melancholy over his breakdown.

Throughout this period, Mrs. Wilson was constantly at his bedside as was also his eldest daughter, Miss Margaret. The devotion of the wife and daughter was no small factor in nursing the president back to mental and more participation in public affairs. Mrs. Wilson stood between her husband and the government, indeed between him and the outside world. It was she who acted as personal secretary, taking notes and writing memoranda and messages to the various cabinet officers and officials of the government generally. Even the private secretary, Mr. Tamm, refrained from entering the bed-chamber except when sent for. He placed his memoranda on vital questions before Mrs. Wilson, leaving it to her to discover the proper moment to ask the president for his opinion or decision. She was, so to speak, the reigning monarch.

An annual address had to be sent to congress in December, 1919, and also in December, 1920. On both occasions, Mr. Wilson was spared the necessity of composition. His cabinet officers wrote memoranda on the topics that had to be covered in these messages and with the help of Secretary Tamm, who wrote them together, the documents were put into finished form and read to Mr. Wilson, who with a few changes, gave his approval, and so was able to fulfill his constitutional function of reporting to congress on the state of the union. Thus did his intimates struggle to keep up appearances in the days when America really had no president.

Don't Keep Milk Bottles Over 72 Hours, Is Edict

Attention of Janesville housewives is called to an important provision of the city milk ordinance Tuesday, in a statement issued by Dr. L. J. Woodworth, sanitary inspector. He emphasized that section which says that milk bottles, cans or vessels are to be thoroughly washed and returned within 72 hours after the contents are removed.

"Many people seem to forget that the milk bottles are the property of the milk companies and are valuable," said Dr. Woodworth. "Some people recognize their value in other ways, however, as they use them for other purpose of their own, not realized by the local ordinance or by milk companies."

It is not too early now, said the sanitary inspector, to start swatting the fly, as many are to be seen in the city despite the cold weather.

While swatting the fly is only a makeshift way of keeping down the number of flies, still it does help to swat them early," he declared.

The True Story —OF— Woodrow Wilson

By David Laurence

CHAPTER XXX.
Why Wilson broke with Lansing and how the government functioned without an active president.

No incident in American history parallels the few days in which the government of the United States and the people of the world followed Woodrow Wilson's physical breakdown. He was unable to function as the chief executive.

Opinions may differ as to whether the importance of public business was neglected—the cabinet took care of every decision and executed every policy. But there can be no doubt that the government of the United States was in a state of emergency after his return from the western trip. The president was disabled and for a long time thereafter was unable to function as the chief executive.

Serious moments there were when it was thought Mr. Wilson would not live. As the crisis was passed and it became apparent that the president would be an invalid, the rest of his life and would be unable to see many others or write communications on matters of state, his supporters developed the fear that someone in the Senate might take advantage of the situation and attempt to amend the constitution which provided that the vice president shall succeed the president in case of death or inability.

The constitution itself is not very clear on the question of what shall be done when a president is disabled. It says:

"In case of the removal of the president from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the office, the same shall devolve on the vice president, and the Congress may by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability, both of the president and vice president, declaring what officer shall then act as president, and such officer shall act accordingly until the disability be removed or a president shall be elected."

Is the vice president to become president or merely assume the duties and discharge the powers of the presidential office until the president's disability is removed? No vice president has ever assumed office on the disability of a president and Mr. Thomas H. Marshall, who was vice president during President Wilson's incapacity, made no effort to succeed him. Congress has never passed a law specifically giving the president that should be followed in case of presidential inability.

After the president suffered a stroke, his condition was so alarming that he was unable for several days to sign documents or attend to public business. Mr. Lansing suggested that for appearances at least, a cabinet meeting should be called and that this would instill confidence in the country that the government was functioning. The first meeting of the cabinet was called with the knowledge of both the president's private secretary and his physician. Dr. Grayson attended the meeting and reported on the improvement in Mr. Wilson's condition. There was no discussion of this or any other meeting about the vice president succeeding Mr. Wilson.

In all 25 cabinet meetings were held, and many important matters discussed and decided. Serious injury might have been done to the public interest if cabinet sessions had not been convened and there is every reason to believe that a demand would have been made in the Senate for succession by Vice President Marshall.

When Mr. Wilson gradually recovered to the point of being able to listen to affairs of state he was surprised at the fact that cabinet meetings had been held. He was told of the incident which led to the summoning of the cabinet. He was unaware of the situation which had existed and of the practically unanimous belief of all his advisers that the holding of cabinet meetings would preserve public confidence in the government while he was unable to function. He demanded the resignation of the secretary of state, Lansing, as a punishment and example.

There were, of course, contributory reasons such as the dissent expressed by Lansing with respect to the Shantung settlement in the Versailles treaty of peace. Mr. Wilson showed displeasure, for instance, on his western trip when he received a telegram from Mr. Lansing stating that one of the attaches of the American peace mission testifying before the senate foreign relations committee had revealed Mr. Lansing's disagreement with the president on the Shantung question, a circumstance which had up to that time been rumored but not confirmed and which, of course, was ammunition for Mr. Wilson's opponents in the treaty fight.

What Mr. Lansing did as secretary of state—the responsible officer of the government who must certify to all proclamations and whose duty under the law it is to notify the vice president of the death or disability of the president—undoubtedly was just the thing that would irritate an individual who felt he was by no means incapacitated. An impartial judgment of the affair cannot be made until the conclusion that the unprecedented functioning of the cabinet as an entity without executive direction, guidance or authority except as derived by implication from the statutes was a faithful move which prevented the unpleasant question of technical disability from being raised by the many who were opposed to Mr. Wilson in those latter days of the treaty fight.

The president's shaky signature to public documents and the gradual improvement thereafter in his handwriting tell a story of how difficult it was for the president to carry on in his hours of physical distress. He was incapable of sustained effort. At best he could write the hour or so to official duties and later two hours and then more as his health improved. Only the most important matters were placed before him in the limited time that his physicians said he could afford to give to public business.

Unfavorable news was withheld from Mr. Wilson and nothing was done that was in the least calculated to excite or disturb Mr. Wilson was given to emotional outbursts, wept very often, and grew melancholy over his breakdown.

Throughout this period, Mrs. Wilson was constantly at his bedside as was also his eldest daughter, Miss Margaret. The location of the president and daughter was no small factor in nursing the president back to more and more participation in public affairs. Mrs. Wilson stood between her husband and the outside world. It was she who acted as personal secretary, taking notes and writing memoranda and messages to the various cabinet officers and officials of the government generally. Even the private secretary, Mr. Tamm, refrained from entering the bedroom except when sent for. He placed his memoranda on vital questions before Mrs. Wilson, leaving it to her to discover the proper moment to ask the president for his opinion or decision. She was so to speak, the relaying monarch.

An annual address had to be sent to Congress in December, 1919, and in December, 1920. On both occasions, Mr. Wilson was spared the necessity of composition. His enact officers wrote memoranda on the topics that had to be covered in these messages and with the help of Secretary Tamm who wrote them into the documents were put into finished form and read to Mr. Wilson, who with a few changes, gave his approval, and so was able to fulfill his constitutional function of carrying the message to Congress on the days when America really had no president.

HOGAN WAS A BUSY MAN AT ALL TIMES OF DAY

Green Hay—Stolen property valued at $1,500, consisting of silk dresses, automobile robes and bicycles, together with four stills and over 200 gallons of alleged moonshine, were seized by police in a search of the residence of Frank Hogan here Monday.

Hogan, who is employed as janitor of the federal building, was taken into custody, with his son, Irving, on a charge of receiving stolen property. His wife, Mrs. Magdalene Hogan, and daughter, Irene, are being held in Appleton on a shoplifting charge.

According to the police the clothing was stolen from Appleton and Green Bay stores.

Don't Keep Milk Bottles Over 72 Hours, Is Edict

Attention of Janesville housewives is called to an important provision of the city milk ordinance Tuesday, in a statement issued by Dr. J. J. Woodworth, sanitary inspector. He emphasized that section which says that milk bottles, cans or vessels are to be thoroughly washed and returned within 72 hours after the contents are removed.

"Many people seem to forget that the milk bottles are the property of the milk companies and are valuable," said Dr. Woodworth. "Some people recognize their value in other ways, however, as they use them for other purposes of their own, not realizing that the local ordinance or by milk companies."

It is not too early now, said the sanitary inspector, to start sweating the R's as many are to be seen in the city despite the cold weather.

"While waiting the fly is only a makeshift way of keeping down the number of flies, until it does help to sweat them out," he declared.

BRITISH LOSING MARKET

London.—Supplies of foreign meat in the markets of Great Britain are gradually ousting those from the dominions, according to figures of imports for 1923. These show that only 28 percent of beef, mutton and lamb imported was produced within the Empire, while in 1922 it was 35 percent and in 1920, 43 percent.

More Cars, Better Rules, Yank Tells British Judge

[By Associated Press.]
Hochdale, England.—Thomas Ashkins, an American living at Southampton, recently was fined five shillings for allowing the engine of his car to remain running, and for leaving the car unattended.

He apologized for breaking the regulations, which were different from those in America. The mayor said, "We think our laws are better than yours."

Ashkins caused laughter by remarking, "I guess, judge, you have no grounds for that observation, as we have 14,000,000 cars in our country, a great sight more than you have here, so we know more about them."
